New York, April 4 .- 9:30 p. m .- General frant has within the past half hour become omewhat restless, changing his position alernately from chair to bed. He has complained of a pain in his throat, which has een relieved by throat application of cocaine. He has occasionally walked about his room.

The impression prevails with many that the hypoderomic injections of brandy were not only employed to rally General Grant from a death swoon, on Thursday morning at day break, but that the Gen ral has since been sustained almost solely by the use of liquids administered by his physicians, this is untrue.

DOINGS IN SOCIETY.

PICKED UP BY A SUNDAY GLOBE REPUBLIC SOCIETY REPORTER.

Easter Morning, Which Gives Poor Mortals Hope that "Because the Lives, We Shall Live, Also "-The Marriage of Mr. Charles Driscol and Miss Annie Smiley -The Embroidery Opening Given by Mrs. L. K. Brown-Progressive Euchre-Personal Mention of Particular Interest to Society People.

This, Easter morning, which celebrates, with its recurrence, the resurrection miracle; which gives poor mortals hope that, "because be lives, we shall live, also," means to the tashionable world the initiatory wearing of a new Spring bonnet.

And, if by church time, there comes dropping down no dolesome Easter rain which signifies seven desolate rainy Sabbaths in succession, the milli ner's triumphs will be a part of the floral display which will decorate the temple of prayer. They will be put on with sigh, however, by many a rebellious beauty whose particular type of loveliness they do not at all "become." As ladies looked into the windows where these bonnets were displayed last week, they wondered, audibly, where style so outre came from, "How can we ever, ever, ever wear them?" asked one of another And the other pensively replied that she believed the ark must have been found at last and these were the cast-off head-gear of Noah's wife and his sons' wives, "So far back as that?" asked the other, thoughtfully. "I was thinking Jezebel might have set the fashion, for you know the Bible says that she 'tired her head and painted her face, and looked out of the window.' And, don't you know, it would tire' 'most anybody's head to wear one of those things?" Her friend looked at her reproachfully, and they passed on. More and more, every year, obtains the beautiful costom of filling altar and chancel with a wealth of bloom and tragrance, conspicuous among which towers the stately ivorythroated calls. Many ladies have foll wed the devout fashion of growing these lillies and bringing them to bloom during the past winter, in order to present them as their Easter ofering at this sacred season.

"Oh, happy flowers! Oh, happy flowers! H w quietly for hours and hours, In dead of night, in cheerful day, Close to my own Lord you stay, Until you gently fade zway. Oh, happy flowers! what would I give In your sweet place all day to live And then to die, my service o'er, Softly as you do, at His door."

The Easter offerings exchanged between riends are widening in their range. One of Prang's exquisite cards was formerly the customary limit, but, now, gitts of considerable financial as well as artistic value change hands. Somewhat intrequently as to the masses, but not rarely in our most tashionable society, jewelry and precious stones and other articles of bijouterie are among these Easter tokens.

Something pretty and always appropris is a little fancy basket in straw-color, pink, pale blue, or any delicate tint, over-run with blossoms. Next to the lily, in point of piety, comes the joy mil or rush-leaved daffodil, one of our research pure to looking Spring plants, and to a person of artistic taste and religious fancies, a cluster of these sets the mind aglow with visions of which took place last Monday morning at half-past six o'clock, was somewhat of surprise to the groom's society friends, who were looking forward to the month of May at the time set for the happy event. The bride's mother and a few triends from the city, with Mr. A. H. Griffith, of Springfield, were in attendance. The Rev. Mr. Broadbeck, now stationed in that city, tied the nuptial knot, after which the guests sat down to a charming little wedding breakfast served the at St. Nicholas, where the marriage took place. The bride wore her traveling dress, a very stylish tailor made costume of gray cloth and velvet, with hat en suite Mr. and Mrs. Griscol left for New Orleans shortly after seven o'clock, and will return to Springfield in a week or so to make their home with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Driscol. Mrs. Driscol's blonde beauty, her culture and her amiability, will win her many friends, when she comes to her new home. She has visited in this city as the guest of Miss Nellie Johnson. Last Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. L. K. Brown gave an embroidery opening to her lady friends in which much of the hand-one work done by her pupils was dis-played to admiring and appreciative eyes. The room was radiant in various bright-h plashes and velvet which hung, in panels and anners from the walls covered tables and chairs with scarfs, pitlows and lamberquins One one of the latter by Mrs. D. The progressive eachre party at Mr. Jo-Little's last Thursday evening was a surprise perpetrated upon that gentleman by his wife, in honor of his forty-fifth birthday. The prizes were unique. The following srticle, published in a New York paper, a few days ago, will be read with interest by Springfield people who are equainted with the gentleman named, Mr. Frank M. Weaver, of this city:

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 31.-Francis M. Wenver, of Salina, O., came to Pough-keepsie a month ago, and registered at a hotel with a young woman, who said her name was Maggie Miller, and that she was a niece of Weaver. A week sgo the hotel pro-prietor presented a sixty dollar bill, which Weaver said he could not pay, and he went with his niece to a private boarding house On Thursday last Chief of Police Brooks recived a telegram from Saline, O., asking tha Weaver be arrested, as be was wanted in that place for obtaining a signature to a note for $395 on false pretenses. An Ohio officer arrested Weaver yesterday afternoon. Weaver arrested him says he is a married man and the father of two children, and Niss Miller informed him last evening that she was not a

On seeing the above, a reporter called at the Weaver residence on North Mechanic street ast night, and learned that she was at the shoe store of Mr. W. A. Hance, on Market street, where she is employed. About halfoust ten o'clock a visit was made to the store where Mr. Hance and Mrs. Weaver were found. They were just closing the store, but but believe important as to the object of the reof allowing Mrs. Weaver to answer questions put to her, Mr. Hance at once proceeded to get angry at being approached all the large cties of the country. on the subject, and after a few hot words, the The following is the personnel of the Club ed out of the store. Not to be put off in this way, however, the GLORE-REPUBLIC scribe waited a reasonable length of time and the repaired to the Weaver residence once more Mr. Hauce and Mrs. Weaver having precede them. Not desiring a repetition of the quarrel in the store, reporter waited about twenty minutes to give the gentleman time to come out. But b didn't come, and the reporter knocked and gained admission, being treated in a very ourteous manner by the lady. Seeing tha he had been baffed in his attempt to keep the matter quiet, the gentleman spologized to the scribe for his conduct in the store, and proceeded to give a full account of the affair

all of which was corroborated by Mrs. Weaver It occurs that Mr. Weaver made a contract with a man named Austin, at Celina, Ohio to manufacture his patent treadle-mill, taking his note for the amount agreed upon for the right, $396. Mr. Austin did not make as many fortunes as he thought he would, and at once had Weaver indicted for obtaining money under talse pretenses, the latter having in the meantime had the note discounted Before the case came to trial, the indictment was quashed This was about two years ago. Not satisfied, however, Mr. Austin bad Weaver again indicted by the next grand jury. This time he was also dismissed before the trial was finished. Still thinking be had a good case against Mr. Weaver, Austin bad him indicted again last fall, and it was on this indictment that he was arrested at Poughkeepsie a few days ago. A Celina officers went on after him, but Mr. Weaver. knowing that he was being persecuted, appealed to the Governor of New York. The latter, after hearing all the facts in the case, refused to r-cognize the requisition for Weaver and set him free. The account of his arrest was seen a few days ago by his friends, but the full particulars of the case are not known to them, and it is for the purpose of placing him in the right light before his friends that the above statement is made. Mr. Hance, who is a partner of Mr. Weaver, has received explanatory letters in regard to the affair, which seem to set the matter all right. As to the young lady in the case, Maggie Miller, nothing was said in the letters, and both Mr. Hance and Mr. Weaver's family are in ignorance as to the relations, if any, between Mr. Weaver and the girl.

A. Davis' paint store on Main treet between Factory and Mechanic. Box was keyed in and the Centrals and Westrns responded promptly. The fire was ocated in a carriage shed and stable belonging to Wm. R. Burnett. The two buildings are on the east side of the alley, but do not adjoin each other. The fire spread rapidly, and in a few moments both buildings seemed doomed. Quick work, however, soon got the blaze under control. The carriage shed was almost otally destroyed, and the other stable badiv amaged, both to the amount of probably $250, which is covered by insurance In the carriage shed were a buggy belonging to C. A. Davis, valued at about $50; a carriage belonging to W.

R. Burnett, valued at $200; a buggy belonging to S. S. Slacker, valued at $100; and a lot of carpets and other household goods belonging to Slacker, valued at about $50. These were all destroyed. In the stable were a fine sleigh, a set of harness, and several bushels of corn, all belonging to William Clark, the saloonist, valued at about $100; which were also destroyed. Two fine borses belonging to Mr. Clark were in the stable but they were gotten out, but not before one of them was badly scorched and bruised. The total loss on buildings, carriages, &c., is about $759. The mount of the insurance could not be learned, The doors to both buildings had been locked early in the evening, but the man who gave the alarm claims that when he went to the stable the door was open. He also says that be could smell burning coal oil, and from all the facts there is no doubt the fire was the work of an incendiarist.

The B ston Mendelsohn Quintette Ciub. Brief mention has been made of the conert to be given by the Mendelsohn Quintette Club, of Boston, at the Grand Opera House, Saturday next, April 11th, the appouncement f which has given general satisfaction, and is a just recognition of the merits of the club, whose history is almost a record of the growth and development of the musical education of America. Organized in 1849, its oncert work has been one of the largest elements in popularizing the best class of instrumental music, and its influence has exended throughout the length and breadth of the country, its tours have made it alike familiar in the quiet villages of New England, the leading cities and towns of the Eastern, Middle, Southern and Western States, and broughout the great centers of population in the Far West and on the Pacific coast, After having extended its popularity beyond the bounds of the United States and the Canadas by a tour throughout Australia, it has recently returned to Boston with new honors gained by the artistic work of its members.
